

Maya Ying Lin

Diego Rivera

Olafur Eliasson

As Eliasson explains, the ideas that have come to fruition are just a small fragment of the picture, disregarding the hundreds of less worthy concepts that fell by the wayside.

“A breakthrough is never a single point on a line, but rather the process of the line itself, a point on a path rather than the actual path itself,”

“Looking for the breakthrough always pushes the goal further in front of me, leaving me never fully satisfied, whereas the breakthroughs I’ve had were often related to the path itself. Breakthroughs, in fact, are more similar to a web of paths rather than a point in life.”

